

Tracey MacKinnon

Director

Appointed May 31, 2019, current appointment expires May 1, 2020

Current Membership: HR Committee (Member)

Tracey MacKinnon is a Civil Engineer with over 25 years of experience in consulting and corporate organizations with a focus on project management and talent development.

Tracey has held numerous leadership and strategy positions in the Canadian Coast Guard, private consulting and Shell Canada and has been noted as a leader of change in building organizations, driven by effective workforce development programs. Currently as the workforce development manager for the LNG Canada project, Tracey is accountable for a strategy to have a qualified construction and operational workforce with a focus on under-represented groups of Indigenous, youth and women.

Tracey is passionate about creating an inclusive and respectful work environment and has been acknowledged for her work in differentiating LNG Canada by focusing on increasing women's participation onsite.

Tracey has been an active member in various organizations to drive results to the shared commitment of improving the number of people entering and completing apprentice programs and maximizing employment in the trades for local BC residents.

Tracey is married to Paul and they have two children, Maeghan and Jackson with whom she loves to spend a day off work, on the golf course, as a family foursome.
